Crawdad Canyon Climbing park

Welcome to the only private climbing park in Utah. Jim Bosse purchased Veyo Pool in 1995 and began the process of transforming it into the beautiful park that it is today. Enlisting the efforts of a few local route developers, and providing them with the resources necessary to realize it's potential, this canyon has become one of the best climbing areas in a state known for some fantastic climbing.

Fate would seem to have been hard at work in a canyon such as this. Consider its orientation with half of the walls in sun and half in shade for much of the day. The deciduous cottonwoods and box elders providing shade in the summer, yet allowing the sun through in the colder months. Even the property lines seem to delineate good climbing from bad with the cliffs becoming shorter, and looser as one crosses out of the park.

That such a place exists in the middle of the great basin desert is surprising. That such a place was developed by an individual with Jim's vision and resources seems to have required some hefty amounts of destiny.

Park Guidelines

A liability form must be on file for every climber.

All climbers under the age of 18 must have the signature of a parent or guardian on the liability form

Dogs are not permitted in the park (a kennel is located in the upper parking lot)

Free Soloing, rope soloing and bouldering is not permitted in the park

Traditional climbing is not permitted in the park

Lead climbers must clip every bolt on the route they are climbing.

Do not tamper with, (add or remove) any of the fixed equipment on the routes.

Acts of vandalism will result in lifetime banishment from the park and criminal charges

A stick clip is recommended on routes where the first bolt hanger is painted yellow.

No profanity

This climbing park is operated under the direction of The Southern Utah Climbers Coalition

The Southern Utah Climbers Coalition is a non profit advocacy organization for the climbing community of southwestern Utah. Our primary function is to represent the interests of the climbing community, to preserve and obtain access to both historic and new climbing areas. We function as a liaison between local climbers and the landowners/ management agencies, and promote stewardship and responsible use of the public and private lands that we recreate upon.
